

DRYDEN HOTEL

THE LEGEND CONTINUES

844-8293

The Dryden Hotel has a long history. In 1844, an early settler named Tom Lewis rented rooms in a building on Main Street in Dryden.

That building was later enlarged and converted into the Grove Hotel. The Grove Hotel was located on the current site of the Dryden Hotel. The Grove Hotel was destroyed by fire in 1866 and was rebuilt in 1871 by James Cole. In the early 1900's, the hotel had modern conveniences added including steam heat and indoor plumbing. The hotel became a prestigious place and the site of many social events. In December of 1995 on the afternoon of the 19th, the hotel was again ravaged by fire.

After 7 months of rebuilding, the hotel reopened on July 3, 1996 with eleven studio apartments, a barber shop, and the hotel's lounge.

As luck would have it, on the afternoon of December 21, 2004 the hotel again suffered severe damage, only this time by water. After gutting most of the building and repairing all the damage, as well as making a few changes, the Hotel reopened again in the spring of 2005.

the Dryden Hotel wishes you many years of enjoyment in our beautiful, new facilities.
